to vote OR NOT to vote is that the ?

"Voting" is equivalent to giving faith in a system which: murders (in war, you're a "hero"); strangles the spirit; has institutionalized and glorified insanity. Politics is a power game. I refuse to be a pawn. So--I never vote.

Stephen Pickering

Dear Mr. Voter:

Some people say "POWER TO THE PEOPLE".
actually it is "THE PEOPLE HAVE ALL THE POWER".
So WHY DON'T YOU DO YOUR DUTY, AND HARASS THE CORPORATE STATE BY VOTING AGAINST IT.

NOTHING TO SAY ABOUT THIS SUBJECT

I care about the world.
Voting is one of the most irresponsible acts imaginable to me. Now is a time that demands I take more responsibility for what I do, and my vote would contrarily delegate some of that responsibility to another person--the infamous politician--rather than accepting that additional responsibility as part of my social being.

By not voting I am affirming my right and responsibility to work out solutions to the myriad problems that face us all, rather than "trusting" others--politicians or a system.
Aside: What if they gave an election and noone voted? Said

Voting is an anacronism.

I am an anacronism.

I vote when I want to.

This election I will vote for the proposition that requires open University of California Regents meetings.

I may vote for Wilson Riles.
I may vote for Herb Foster, but more out of a liking for one of his staff members than as a reponse to the dynacism of his campaign.

Voting was meant to be a privilege of the eccentric. To be a man was meant to be an eccentricity.
